Buddy Program unites college, community

by Kendra Bonnell
editor

President Gardner once said in chapel that college students can be some of the lonliest people. It's a fact--no matter what our age we all need somebody to care, listen, be with and relate to. A program on campus which recognizes that need in others and strives to fulfill it is the Buddy Program.

The Buddy Program, which is run locally by Pat Sumrall of the Chester County Juvenile Court and campus coordinator Darrell Sharp, is the biggest it has ever been. It consists of 55 college students and 35 Chester County junior and senior high students. The program is a preventive group which helps young people and attempts to meet their needs.

According to Sharp, each college buddy is asked to contact his high school buddy three times a week either by writing, calling or visiting them. College men are given junior high or high school boys to contact, and college women are assigned to the girls. Every two weeks the volunteers then report what contact has been made to Sharp.

"One aspect of the program is social club involvement. Each club has consented to do a project for the Buddy Program throughout the year. Philo sponsored a get acquainted party on October 1, and Lambda Delta Lambda Delta Phi sponsored a Halloween Party for the Buddy Program Tuesday night.

Phi had a Halloween party for us on Tuesday night. Tri Zeta and Sigma Rho are co-sponsoring a Thanksgiving dinner, and Phi Kappa Alpha plans to have a Christmas party for us. Plans for other social club projects are still in the making. This spring we do hope to have a carnival with all the social clubs helping with it," Sharp explained.

Besides giving their time and talents to create special occasions for the young people participating in the program, the volunteers also give themselves. They try to follow a set of guidelines when interacting with their younger-age buddies. These guidelines aren't just restricted to program use but can serve as a refreshing reminder of how we should act toward others each day.

1. Be a good listener. Don't talk too much. One of the best ways to help someone is just to listen to what they're saying. Respect can be gained by listening. Communication gaps can be bridged by owning a good ear.

2. Don't pass judgment. Be objective. Not everyone owns the same set of values you do.

3. Respect confidentiality. The character of a person is not an open topic for gossip.

4. Be supportive. Lift up someone when they're down and keep them going when they're up.

5. Be a good example. We need to represent that which is basically good and right. Actions speak louder than words.

6. Give attention, affection and love. Show someone you care and say it too. It's not always easy to love those who need it the most, but the rewards are there if you care.

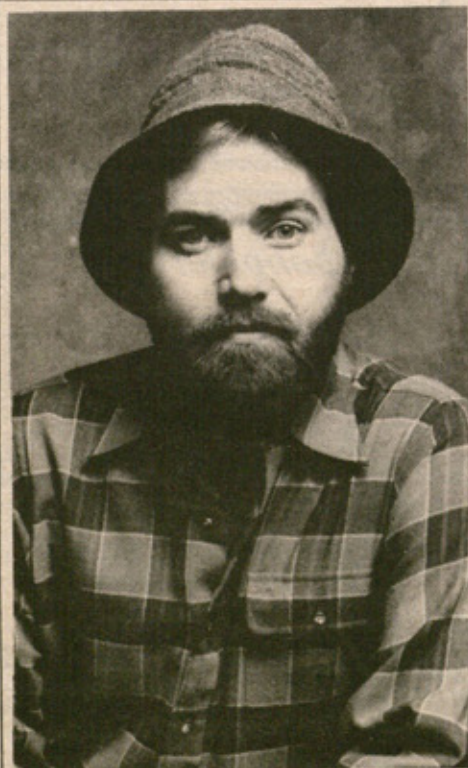

7. Don't have prejudice. Don't let your prejudices run your life and control your thoughts and actions.

8. Present your ideas clearly and simply. Say what you mean and mean what you say. Never say anything you don't intend to back up.

9. Give positive reinforcement. Acceptable behavior deserves praise. Positive reinforcement keeps acceptable behavior continuing.

10. Don't expect a thank you. We must all learn to take the little things, the half smiles, as our rewards for a job well done.

It's not too late to become a part of the Buddy Program and put these guidelines into practice. Those interested in joining and being involved should contact Darrell Sharp.

John Paul Walters

"The Cat" is coming back to campus!

by Vickie Leatherwood
staff reporter

John Paul Walters, a traveling singer, songwriter and soloist, returns to Freed-Hardeman tonight for the third year in a row. This time the occasion is Sadie Hawkins.

Walters was born in Atlanta, GA, and has been a traveler ever since he could walk. He performs regularly on college campuses throughout the United States with his gut string guitar as his only accompaniment. Besides being a great singer and musician, Walters is an excellent songwriter. He has appeared in concert with performers such as Kenny Rogers, Dolly Parton, Pure Prairie League, The Amazing Rhythm Aces, The Association and B. J. Thomas.

If you have never heard John Paul

Walters perform you don't know what you're missing. And if you have had the pleasure of attending one of his past performances on campus you should be looking forward to another great performance tonight.

by Kim Glisson
staff reporter

Girls--this is your last chance! Ask out that guy that you've been eyeing from afar! Sadie Hawkins may be the only chance for you and that special guy to meet and get to know each other. He could be the one for you, but you better act fast because today is your last day.

The idea of Sadie Hawkins has been around "since Freed-Hardeman has been called Freed-Hardeman," according to Ray Sullins, the president of the junior class. The junior class sponsors the yearly event. Profits from the occasion are used to fund the Junior-Senior Banquet.

John Paul Walters will be the main attraction at Sadie Hawkins this year. There will also be a mock wedding ceremony for all couples and several surprise games. Each couple will be able to have their picture taken together; however it will not be possible to get your picture taken with your date if you don't have tickets for the rest of the show. Tickets can be purchased at the door tonight. Tickets cost $10.00 per couple or $7.00 per person, so it would be smart to get yourself a date... male, female, or canine. Remember, the fun begins at 6 p.m. tonight.

Cheerleaders and social clubs unite to cheer on Lions

by Anna Eubanks
assistant editor

You've heard the cheer--"We've got spirit, yes we do. We've got spirit how 'bout you?" Well, that's the question F-HC's cheerleaders are asking. According to Mary Davenport, captain of the squad, the goal of the cheerleaders this semester is to see how much enthusiasm they can evoke from the student body in support of the Freed-Hardeman College Lions and Lady Lions.

A new plan has been initiated to motivate students to get out and support the home team. With the start of the basketball season, there will be competition among the social clubs for the display of the most school spirit at basketball games. During one basketball game each week, three faculty members will judge the social clubs on their spirit. The game to be judged will not be announced beforehand. The club judged to have the most spirit during the game will be awarded a spirit stick the following day in chapel. At the end of the season, the club winning the most spirit sticks will receive a trophy.

Each of the six social clubs will have a designated area of the gym in which to sit during the games. Members of the club may choose whatever means they prefer to show their spirit. They may do anything from making signs and banners to forming their own Loon Platoon-type troupe. If any of the clubs plan to display their spirit in a half time activity, they should coordinate their activity through Davenport.

According to Sylvia Harris, sponsor of the cheerleaders, the purpose of the spirit stick award is to build enthusiasm and support throughout the semester. Harris hopes the plan will create an ongoing support for the team that will bring students out to games other than just Homecoming and games against rival teams. Davenport said, "This year the squad is trying to build up the most spirit in the clubs there has ever been."

Again this year, the cheerleaders will be accompanied on the sidelines by the Lion mascot. The two chosen to serve as mascot this year are Eric Flowers and Bill Freeze. Flowers is a freshman from Centerville, TN, and Freeze is a junior from Fort Worth, TX.

So...if you're dedicated to your social club and you're behind the Lions, now is your chance to show it. Start now painting signs, making banners and tuning up your vocal cords for the most spirit-filled basketball season yet!

Hollingsworth named Bronze Medalist

by Kim Hale
staff reporter

John G. Hollingsworth Assistant Academic Dean and Professor of Interdisciplinary Studies and Bible was presented the Bronz Award for Professor of the Year in chapel Monday. He was nominated for the award by President E. Claude Gardner. The award is sponsored nationally by the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education. Hollingsworth said it was one of the finest bits of recognition he has received because it is a national award given to about 40 professors nationwide. In accepting the award, Hollingsworth thanked several people for making him what he is today because he is not a self-made man.

According to Hollingsworth, the best part of his job is teaching young people. He looks forward to interacting with his students both in and out of the classroom. He encourages all of his students to do nothing less than their best. He said the worst part of his job is telling people things that they do not want to hear about their academic careers. As for the future, Hollingsworth plans to remain at F-HC until retirement as well as return to full time preaching. Until that time he can be found pushing his students to do their best and helping them plan their academic career.

Student Government members work to beautify campus

by Todd Fulkerson
staff reporter

The Student Government Association has been very busy lately fulfilling its many duties to the school. October has been an especially full month for the S.G.A.

First, Oct. 8 was designated as "Clean-up Day". On this day the representatives took trash bags all over campus and collected garbage. The S.G.A. sponsored "Clean-up Day" in an effort to help beautify the campus.

In conjunction with this event the Student Government hopes to spark a conscientious campus by stenciling the trash cans around campus with this slogan: "HELP KEEP OUR CAMPUS CLEAN! STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION" If this project is approved it will be next semester before the trash cans will be stenciled.

The Elder's Appreciation Dinner, held on October 9, was an occasion for which the S.G.A. decorated and served.

This past week was designated

"Alcohol Awareness Week." The S.G.A. took charge of chapel on Monday the 19th, and featured policeman Mike Woodham as the speaker. "Alcohol Awareness Week" is a program designed to familiarize students with the dangers of alcohol abuse.

Some other plans for the S.G.A. include Open Dorms which is scheduled to be Saturday, Oct. 31, and is an event where the men are able to visit the women's dorm rooms for trick-or-treat candy. The women will do the same in visiting the men's rooms. S.G.A. also looks to serve supper in Gano on Thursday the 29th.

November holds many activities for the S.G.A. including the Harvest Moon Party. Details of this event are not yet complete, and the date has not been officially set.

Watch for these and other events being sponsored by the S.G.A. Also remember to turn any student concerns into your respective representatives. The S.G.A. is here to serve you; take advantage of it.

F-HC sends largest group to world mission workshop

by Lisa Springer
staff reporter

Freed-Hardeman College had the largest group to attend the World Mission Workshop with 95 participants. Groups from all over the world came to attend the workshop and learn more of the spiritual situation of the world. Present statistics show that only 50% of the world has heard the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Chuckie Pendergrass said, "It gave me a better insight on my life mission plan. It also enlightened my vision to the needs of the lost both spiritually and physically."

Speakers from all over the world spoke about the need of more missionaries to take the "Victory of Jesus" to others. Charles White spoke about how people are more receptive when people know that you are interested in their physical well being as well as their spiritual condition. He says mobile medical mission teams are in great need. Bob Hare has been a missionary from several years behind the "Iron Curtain". He talked about "Commitment Unto Death" and cited examples he had witnessed in his life of people losing their lives. Maurice Hall informed members of his lecture that short wave is going all over Asia in the languages of Russian, Chinese, English, and Japanese.

There were special classes held for the women on the probable views Mary, mother of Jesus, held during the life and death of her Son. The four sessions consisted of the topics on her submission, joy, anguish, and courage. The speakers dramatized the classes as if they were really the mother of Jesus. Earl Edwards spoke on "How to Cope with Culture Shock" and Evertt Huffard talked about "How to Reach the Moslem World". Elsie Huffard showed authentic items from the Holy Land to demonstrate her talk "If you had Been There."

Brian McDonald contemplates how to break the news to Ini Mkpang that in America soccer is played without the use of a table.

Legends bid for return to charts

by Tim Dills
music critic

Rock music is full of legendary figures. One legendary artist and one legendary group have recently released new albums causing a commotion in the music world. The artist is Bruce Springsteen, the group is Pink Floyd.

Bruce Springsteen is the current epitome of rock music. No frills, no games, no gadgets, no nonsense. Bruce tore down the Top 40 barrier with his 1984 album, Born in the U.S.A. and strengthened his grip on the title of "Boss" by dominating the charts for several weeks last fall when he released a live five album set. This time around Bruce changes direction some to bring home another winner in Tunnel of Love.

Tunnel of Love is an album about relationships. Most songs deal with the tried-and-true romantic relationship theme. Some of them deal with it almost flippantly such as "Ain't Got You" or "All that Heaven Will Allow." Others cut to the bone such as the sad "One Step Up," the lead-off single "Brilliant Disguise" or the chilling "Valentine's Day." Springsteen, known for his songs about the working man, can surely teach some Top 40 songwriters the right way to write a song. The lyrics on Tunnel of Love are superb. Bruce can tell a story like few others have been able to do.

Musically, Tunnel of Love may surprise those who just jumped on Springsteen's bandwagon after the Born in the U.S.A. album. The music, like much of the lyrical content, is reflective. A few of the songs bring to mind Springsteen's 1982 acoustic album Nebraska. Several of the songs on the new album also sound similar to the single "My Hometown." Springsteen's E Street Band performs on the album but only sparingly. Most of the work on this album is done by Springsteen. I strongly suggest you grab a copy of Tunnel of Love and give it a spin. It may not become Bruce's biggest seller, but it is worthy of becoming so.

Pink Floyd has been around for 20 years, and their music is still as important today as it was when it first started. Their new album is titled A Momentary Lapse of Reason. It is the group's first album since Roger Waters left the group to go solo. Pink Floyd is known for the incredible Dark Side of the Moon and The Wall albums. Although Waters has left the group, Pink Floyd does not hurt on A Momentary Lapse of Reason.

This album begins with an instrumental, "Signs of Life" which promptly segues into their first single "Learning to Fly." There is no new formula employed by the group on this album. It sounds like Pink Floyd, which is good considering no one else can sound like Pink Floyd. Notable cuts include "One Slip" and "On the Turning Away." If you like rock music you can mellow out to while still fulfilling that need to slowly rock your eyebrows away, Pink Floyd's latest is what you need.

Next time we'll catch up on the latest releases by several artists with a series of mini-reviews.

- ° Freshmen have not been parking their cars in the Loyd Auditorium lot.
- ° A request was made to switch from 3-on-3 to 5-on-5 basketball in intramurals.
- ° There is no lighting around the running track.
